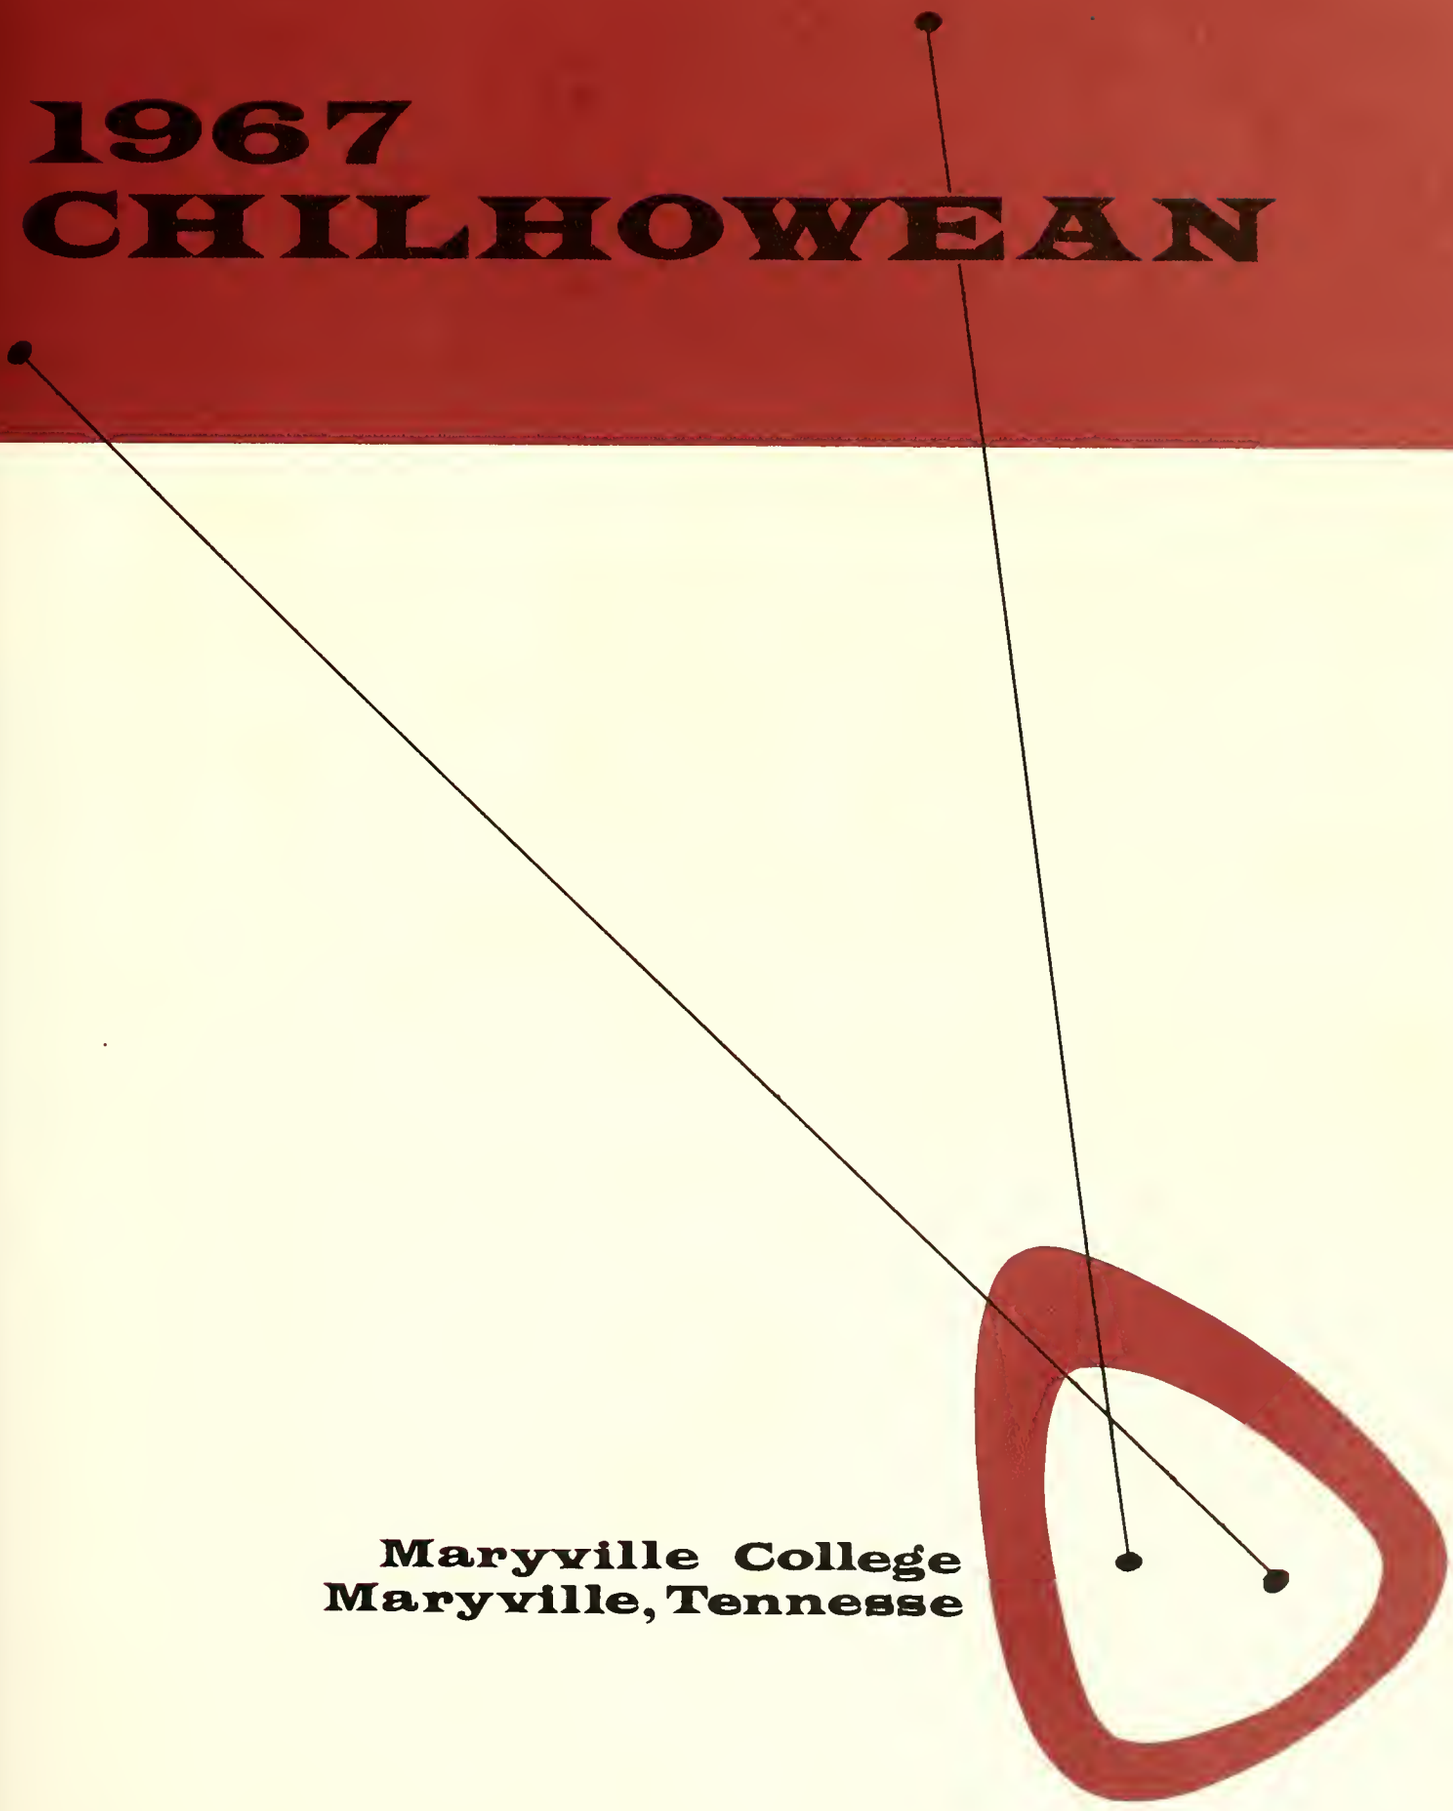
CHILHOWEAN



Maryville College
Maryville, Tennesse

Foreword

Yes, we are the people. we are not false. we are men because we are real. solitarily existing—musing, creating—destroying; collectively quibbling—agreeing, disfaming—honoring, weeping—laughing—praying. we fail succeed—then doitagain; and all the world—vivacious dawn, understanding dusk—sighs our sorrows, laughs our laughs. like jonquils we are—blooming, dying, rising again with hope. Building and rebuilding, always looking forward, searching, striving, persevering; the same yet not the same, something forever new; always shifting, seething, changing and ah, but living, now and forever growing . . .

Dedication

Dr. Frank D. McClelland

If he is indeed wise he does not bid you enter the house of his wisdom, but rather leads you to the threshold of your own mind.

Kahlil Gibran

"Hear these announcements, please." It is eight a.m. in the Maryville College Chapel. The vigorous ex-Marine major mounts the platform and begins reading from hastily scrawled notices handed to him moments before, interpreting by means of his own rare inflections, pronouncing the names of Spanish musicians in his individualized Spanish accent, and ad libbing when he finds the impulse irrepressible. "The leader of the service this morning," he announces matter-of-factly as the President plunges through the side door, "is the late Joseph J. Copeland." From the audience comes spontaneous applause or a side remark like "Man, he's cool."

He is indeed cool, but to the Maryville College student body he is much more. Because of his years as a student here before entering the Marine Corps during World War I, he represents to us an alumnus who in his integrity, loyalty, faith, and service, typifies the best in the Maryville tradition. At the same time, because of his thirty years of leadership as dean (interrupted by service in World War II), we like to think of him as a symbol of the continuing progress and change of which we are proud—progress seen this year in the organization of the American Studies Seminar and the plans for extensive innovations in calendar and curriculum.

From his office in Anderson Hall where he claims to do little "except look at books, papers, and people," he looks deeply into the heart of an institution, quietly advising and, if necessary, firmly denying, but always concerning himself sincerely with the problems of the entire faculty and student body. While working what seems to be at least a thirty-hour day, he still finds time for active participation in the Church, in the Home Avenue Mission, in civic clubs, in Boy Scouts, in the various education associations—and in faculty skits for Barnwarming.

Although he has received many honors during his lifetime, including a citation for gallantry in action during World War I, we feel it fitting to add one more, which might also be called a citation for gallantry in action—this time on the academic front. To Dr. Frank D. McClelland, whose wisdom has guided us, whose faith has given us courage, and whose sincerity has made us believe in him—and in ourselves, we dedicate the 1967 CHILHOWEAN.

A man with a vision

Meanwhile, back at the barn? . . .

Solitude

"When I'm alone"—the words tripped off his tongue
As though to be alone were nothing strange.
"When I was young," he said; "when I was young. . . ."
I thought of age, and loneliness, and change.
I thought how strange we grow when we're alone,
And how unlike the selves that meet and talk,
And blow the candles out, and say good night.

Alone. . . . The word life endured and known.
It is the stillness where our spirits walk
And all but inmost faith is overthrown.

—Siegfried Sassoon

Despair

The sun rises and the sun sets—
And all that goes between is purple-yellow shadows, Such life-breath and stranger's eyes that pierce lonely corners and haunt fire-watches of the mind . . .
the grip of silence and we are afraid . . .

Would I could blow the candle out—Make a perfect pearl from the warm melted wax—
Then place it from my palm to yours

This I should do as the colors fade in evening or deer sleep at dusk or the bird wakes on the morning.

So pale and taunted—
We stand and tremble in the light of other days—gone and going—

The whirl of dusty moving feet confounds the tears—
The soul hangs dry-eyed over the sill
And yearns to weep for all the noise.

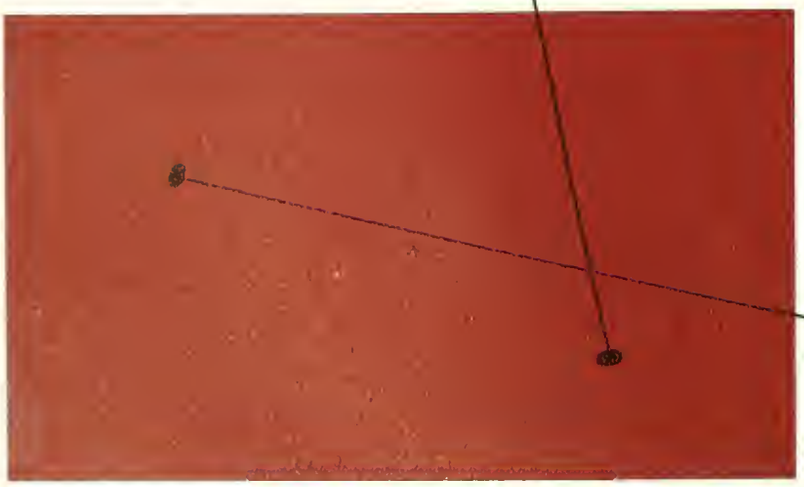
—Sara V. Humphries



Reverence

i thank You God for most this amazing day;for the leaping greenly spirits of trees and a blue true dream of sky;and for everything which is natural which is infinite which is yes

(i who have died am alive again today, and this is the sun's birthday;this is the birth day of life and of love and wings:and of the gay great happening illimitably earth) how should tasting touching hearing seeing breathing any—lifted from the no of all nothing—human merely being doubt unimaginable You?

(now the ears of my ears awake and now the eyes of my eyes are opened)

—e. e. cummings

Joy

Everyone suddenly burst out singing;
And I was filled with such delight
As prisoned birds must find in freedom Winging wildly across the white Orchards and dark green fields; on; on;
and out of sight.

Everyone's voice was suddenly lifted,
And beauty came like the setting sun.
My heart was shaken with tears, and horror Drifted away. . . . O, but everyone Was a bird; and the song was wordless; the singing will never be done.

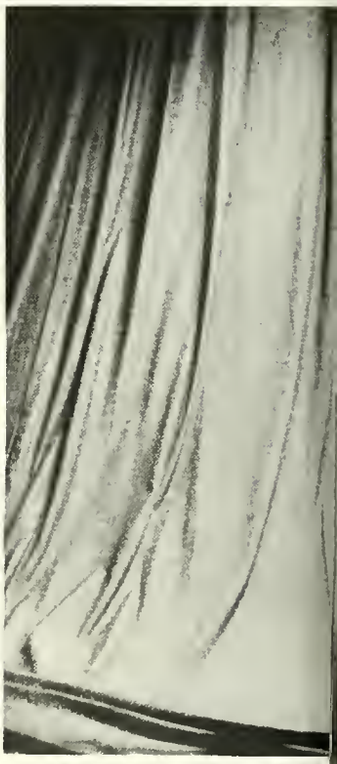
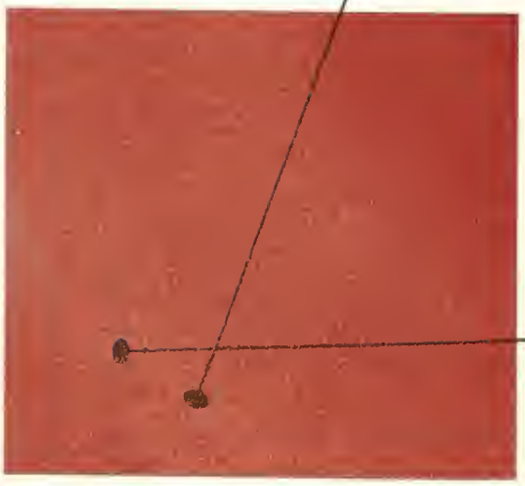
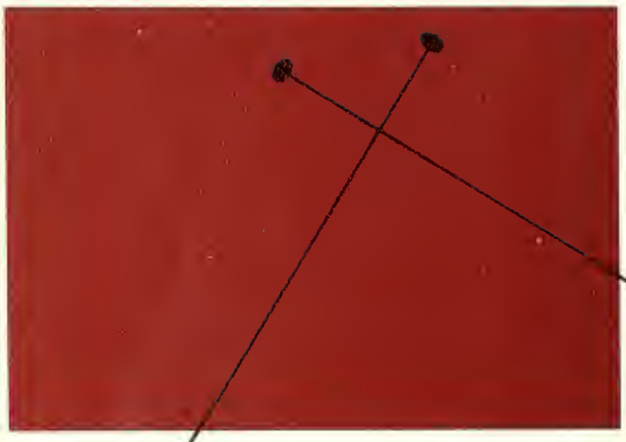
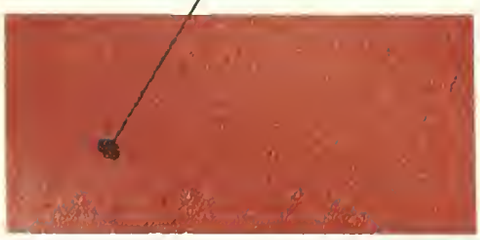
—Siegfried Sassoon









Concentration

It is beyond me
No matter how I wish it to be A brown mouse.
—David R. Powell

Hoopla

Whoopee do!
Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious and all that stuff;
come into my pintsizedworld of lollypops and catchmeifyoucan and see if you can walk on your hands or, balance an umbrella on your chin;
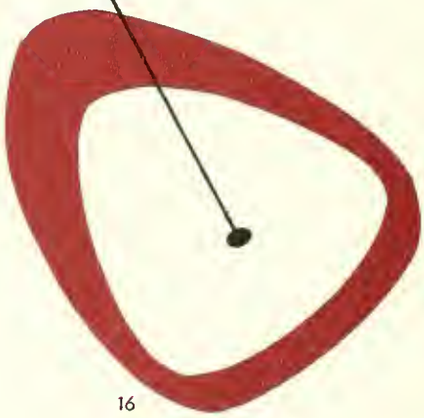
ha, betcha can't!

—Beverly Minear



Triumph

Give me the moon at my feet
Put my feet upon the crescent, like a Lord!
O let my ankles be bathed in moonlight, that I may go sure and moon-shed, cool and bright-footed towards my goal.

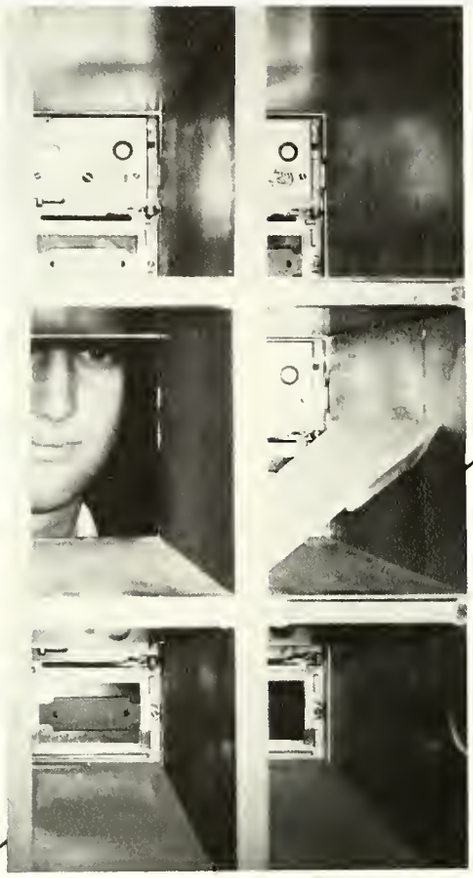
—D. H. Lawrence



Anticipation

Three men came talking up the road
And still "tomorrow" was the word.

The night was clear with the lamp's glitter.
The first man spoke and his voice was bitter:

"Tomorrow like another day I draw the dole and rust away."

The second one said scared and low,
"Tomorrow I may have to go."

And the two spoke never another word
But drew together and looked at the third.

And the third man said, "If tomorrow exists, It's a day of streets like rivers of fists,

"It's the end of crawling, the end of doles,
And men are treated as human souls."

I stood in the doorway and heard these things
As the three came past with the step of kings.

—John Manifold

ACADEMICS

The skyscrapers stand proud They seem to say they have sought the absolute and made it their own.
Yet they are blameless, innocent as dumb steel and the dumber concrete of their bastions.
"Man made us," they murmur. "We are proud only as man is proud and we have no more found the absolute than has men."

—Carl Sandburg

HONORS

Look for your own. Do not do what someone else could do as well as y Do not say, do not write what someone else could say, could write as well as you. Care for nothing in yourself but what you feel exists nowhere else—and out of yourself create impatiently or patiently—the most irreplaceable of t ings.

ORGANIZATIONS

The scaffolding holds the arch in place till the keystone is put in to stay.
Then the scaffolding comes out.
Then the arch stands strong as all the massed pressing parts of the arch and loose as any sag or spread failing of the builders' intention, hope.
"The arch never sleeps."
Living in union it holds.
So long as each piece does its work the arch is alive, singing, a restless choral.

SPORTS

The fire leaps up to spur us on.
We hear the crowd, a surging roar.
And on the field, we feel alone.
An athlete must compete to live,
And soon the thrill, the quest
Of yet another game begins for us.
Faster . . . Higher . . . Farther.
We give our best—there is no more.

PREFACE

Through pictures and verse we have presented to you the moods and emotions of youth in a time of transition. At Maryville, three seniors have expressed well those things which we "dimly and dumbly feel." These pages contain their poetry—in tribute . . . and in gratitude.

No . . .
I cannot ask you to wait . . .
There is a point where love asks too much . . .
Where eyes try too hard to see glow and warmth . . .
And other eyes are capable only of dry tears.

No need for the grief or the pain of longing now—
These belong to another story already told—

Or perhaps add to another play yet to be performed

I cannot know why my name was not Posted beside yours in the cast.
All I know that I am not arrived yet—here where you are.

Perhaps some late afternoon I shall arrive
And catch you unaware by the living room
Fire
And we will sit down in the twilight of That room
In the lazy shawl of late-day mist about
The furniture
And talk of the trip so far and the play.

Then again—
My arrival may well be too late . . .
There may be only the low glowing fire
And the empty couch to welcome me there.

No . . .
I cannot ask you to wait . . .
I might never come at all.

—Sara Humphries

It is in winter
When the trees sleep
That I miss
The apple blossoms.

—Dave Powell

REFLECTIONS

The wind in yellow leaves is sighing, crying that the end of yellow leaves must come some day, and they must follow fall in haunting softness down brown black boughs, in small heaps that gather like golden snow below each trunk and sleep.

—Nelson Miller

". . . of Never"
Every once and maybe—there you are.
We smile and touch and part.
For the test of Never it is that smile
That makes you what you are
—and that touch what I long to become

—Dave Powell

OF OUR TIME

There was a facet of glass that made me wish I hadn't given glass but rather wood or wine or cloth.

Reflecting the hot noon sun the glaring dish made me one with heat and white and sheets of light.

Now I know a gift that glares, when a gift of glow from one who cares was what was meant, will not suffice.

Yes, and such a meager way
—a gift at all—to have to say that my intent (of wood or wine or cloth) was not to soil, decay or be drunk down to leave such empty glass,
But rather was a question
"Do you understand?"

—Dave Powell

I am brother to dust—
Yea, a small, sad lump of wonder.
On the point of forever
I dance a lingering step with Death.
For the sake of maybe
I walk beside you.
Love me.
I am but brother to dust,
I dance on the point of forever a lingering step.

—Dave Powell

Dwarf that tethers dreams
Tie one to this Restless sleep—
Fancies elude me.

—Dave Powell

If
I could hold you now by my tears
my sighs my thoughts
my eyes
If
I could but speak one word a word that would suffice a word that would impoverish your confusion a word that I could know as my own a word that I could offer to you now—and know the security of its having been spoken
If I could . . .
Yet
even so I know full well I would not, for even as the breath of wind chimes cannot be held in lavender bottles for safe keeping cannot love be pressed beneath glass without distortion.

—Sara Humphries

We built a fawn and silent fire that everlasting night
And sat by sawdust shores to watch it melt
On borrowed flutes we sighed a lemon tune
That sprouted misty wings to ease its flight
As dreary damp it drifted down the rivers of the moon.

—Dave Powell
